University of Melbourne

What's this program about?

The University of Melbourne (UniMelbourne) has helped shape Melbourne and Australia's social, cultural and scientific life for more than 150 years. Now is an exciting time to study at UniMelbourne because it has implemented an entirely new "Melbourne Model" of teaching and learning. The curriculum reform means a variety of new options are available, including university-wide "Breadth Subjects" designed to expose students to different ways of understanding through cross-disciplinary learning and teaching. Students will find opportunities for meaningful undergraduate research, cultural and creative programs, volunteer work, and many extracurricular options. Modeled after Oxford University, the campus is a blend of well-kept traditional buildings and gardens with contemporary architecture. Outstanding student support services and the engaging presence of 100 nationalities are proud features of UniMelbourne. The Parkland (main) campus is where the action is – near City Centre and connected by an easy tram ride or walk. Melbourne is one of the world's most liveable cities. You will feel confident and relaxed as you walk or ride a bike on established lanes through diverse neighborhoods, business districts, parks and cultural venues.
